Sports Info Solutions is pleased to announce the following organizational changes.

Rob Dougherty has been promoted to Vice President of Information Technology. Since Rob joined SIS three years ago as the Director of IT, he has led the expansion of the IT department, enhanced our hardware and software licensing, and provided excellent customer support for SIS clients. With this promotion Rob will also take a larger role in financial aspects of SIS.

Joe Rosales has been promoted to Vice President of Business Operations. Joe has a strong understanding of all aspects of our business having worked in three different areas of SIS: Research and Development, Operations and Business Development. Joe had been integral to the company's recent growth, contributing to both baseball analytics and business development, including the launch of the Japanese baseball operation.

Corey March has been promoted to Business Development Analyst. Since joining SIS in 2016, Corey quickly acclimated to the company's products and clients and has taken a leading role in developing and maintaining strong customer relationships. He will continue to serve as a primary point of contact for Sports Info Solutions clients.

The next announcement is bittersweet. President Ben Jedlovec will be leaving Sports Info Solutions at the end of the year to take on a new role working at MLBAM. Nearly a decade ago, Ben started at the company right out of college and grew from an entry-level staff member into the role of President. He has had a key impact on the company's growth and success including the expansion of our business and the development of our football operations. Speaking personally, I am very happy for Ben as he moves into a new and challenging role in his sports business career. But, of course, I am very sad to lose him at SIS.

With Ben's departure, my role as CEO will expand to include Ben's previous responsibilities as President. SIS has a strong management team in place and there is no question that this group will continue to provide excellent direction for the company.

Feel free to reach out to me with any questions. Please join me in congratulating Rob, Joe, and Corey on their promotions!
